The Individual Design Trend

Totally New Design in Electronic Switching

Plugs and sockets have been partners for more than a hundred years. And ever since then, creative minds all over the world have contemplated on what the interface between cable and hole in the wall should look like. So has FAWO, system vendor for technical interior equipment of caravans and mobile homes.

The innovative company from Nieder-Olm has come up with an entirely newly designed installed equipment. The sophisticated design of the new light switches and sockets were inspired by technical perfection, quality awareness, feel for aesthetic and a technically mature passion for detail. The switch program is called MATEO and is distinguished by a modern and fresh look with clear lines: Forms are more linear and angular. The extreme flatness that make edges disappear also takes effect in this respect.

Material diversity is the best way for more individuality and variety. Extensive and exclusive material combination is also made possible by the manufacturer (INPROJAL). For example, inserts finished in stainless steel or with a wooden decor. High-quality coated frames or switches add that special splash of color. Whether built in or built-up – they will most certainly all be "eye catchers" that offer further options for personalized interior decorating.

An interesting issue for all renowned vehicle manufacturers that also set themselves apart through their switch designs, offering buyers of high-price mobile homes with elegant luxury variants and interesting added value. Run-of-the-mill products are in this market segment of the mobile world more than out. Customers from this segment attach great importance to a new look as well as individual interior features that lend a personal note to mobile living.
